PAYNE TARIFF BILL PASSES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Minority Leader Clark Fails in Effort to Send Bill Back to the Ways and Means Committee.

161. One Republican, Austin (Tenn.), and Wickliffe, voted for it. An at- tures. tempt by Champ Clark, the minority leader, to recommit the bill with instructions, signally failed.

The day was filled with excitement from the moment the session began until the minute of adjournment. The members were keyed up to the highest pitch and a practically full membership remained on duty throughout. The final vote demonstrated the canacity of the Republican organization to get together.

The situation with respect to lumber was greatly relieved to the Republican leaders in the house when it became manifest that the advocates of the proposition placing it on the free list were in the minority. Because of that fact, Mr. Fitzgerald (N. Y.) charged that a midnight deal had had selected most carefully from the been made whereby free lumber was great store house of Astronomy the to be voted down and the rates on barley and barley malt increased, and this notwithstanding the denials of Messrs. TWO HAPPY KIDS ON EASTER MORNING.

Song of the Resurrection Morn

(After Richard Le Gallienne.)

WAKE, fond heart, and sing an Easter song! A To the sweet anthem of returning bird And swelling bud and pale ascending blade Add the last word.

Drear was the winter and the waiting long. Heart, there were hours, indeed, thou wert afraid, So long the spring delayed.

WAKE, fond heart, and go thou forth and sing! A Unite thy voice to all this music sweet Of opening leaf and busy, building wing And falling showers:

The murmur soft of little lives newborn. The armies of the grass, the myriad feet Of marching flowers.

SHUT in the winter's alabaster tomb. So white and still the sleeping summer lay That dead she seemed.

And none might know how in her magic side * Slept the young spring and moved and smiled and dreamed.

Behold, she wakes again and, open eyed, Gazes, in wonder, round the leafy room At the young flowers. Upon this Easter day Awaken, too, my heart, open thine eyes, And from thy seeming death thou, too, arise.

JOW softly blows the resurrection horn Across the meadows, over the far hills! In the soul's garden a new sweetness stirs, And the heart fills,

And in and out the mind flow the soft airs. Awake, fond heart, and sing this Easter morn! In the year's resurrection do thy part. Awake, fond heart!

You Cannot Answer These Questions!

1-Why do you continue bathing your knees and elbows one at a time, when you can stretch out in a full bath tempered to suit you, and can do so every morning if you wish?

2-Why pump and carry water for your kitchen and lanndry work when you can have it at hand for the turning c. a faucet?

3-Why take chances on drinking germ-filled cistern water when you can get it from a large reservoir filtered through the best filter plant South of the Ohio River?

4-Why have a dry, dismallooking yard when you can have it filled with green grass and blooming flowers, and can at the same time get rid of the dust in the street?

5-Why suffer other inconveniences when you can have everything for the comfort and health of your family right in the house?

6-Is it not true that the answer is not "lack of money," but lack of economy and enterprise and indifference to getting the most out of life!

Easter Monday At Bourg

UST when the egg began to cut such an important figure in the celebration of the Easter festival is still a subject of grave dis-It is perfectly clear, however, that the good people of the early middle ages knew all about it. The folklore of that period makes frequent refin Easter doings, and there have been banded down numerous entertaining stories about it. One of them tells how a very beautiful young woman secured a noble husband through its

Her name was Margaret, and she was a royal princess, the daughter of the Emperor Maximilian of Germany. She was born at Ghent in 1480, and, although that is a long time ago, her fame as an attractive young person still survives. When one looks on her fair face as the old time painters have depicted her it seems incredible that she should have found it difficult to provide herself with a suitable husband. Yet it happened so. When she was still an infant Margaret was betrothed to Charles VIII. of France. Of course the tiny princess had no opportunity to say nay, and she grew to maidenhood in the belief that her matrimonial affairs were all settled. Her royal lover proved faithless. The charms of Anne of Brittany made him indifferent to the fact that he had promised to become the son-in-law of the German emperor, and he married her. Margaret was only eleven, altogether too young to lose her beauty sleep over the matter. Her father was exceedingly wroth, but nothing drendful came of it. He waited until his heiress was seventeen and married her to Don Juan of Spain, son of Ferdinand and Isabella.

Almost before Margaret had made her new husband's acquaintance, even before he had had an opportunity to introduce his bride to the Spanish court, he fell sick and died. Under the circumstances Margaret was not inconsolable, but she waited another four years before she began to scan the matrimonial horizon in search of No. 2. Her experience had taught her one thing-in future she purposed doing her own selecting, with no aid from anybody except Providence. Finally, at the age of twenty-one, more beautiful than ever, the young widow put off her weeds and notified Providence that the game was on. In order that she might enlist the services of her patron soint she set out on a pilgrimage to a shrine in the south of France. Midway of the journey the princess meant the proffer of his heart and and her party halted at the little village of Bourg for a few days' rest. It garet hesitated, and her cheeks flushed Hardman & Royce region of the Cevennes, with great, dark forests on every side.

It happened to be the Eastertide. On Easter Monday the chatelaine of the castle at which the princess was a guest proposed that a party should be made up to attend the village games. Margaret accepted the proposition with enthusiasm. For a long time she watched the varying scene with the liveliest interest. The day was perfect. The air was soft and genial, and Nature was in her most amiable mood. Luncheon was served in the open, and afterward the great personages put aside their state and joined in the

Toward the middle of the afternoon came the great event of the day, the famous egg contest of Bourg. Several men in holiday attire advanced, each with a basket on his arm containing the gayly colored eggs which were to be used in the contest. There were twelve dozen of these in all, and one by one they were distributed over the field in a series of figures. When all was ready the music changed to a stately measure and a young man and his chosen partner stepped forward and began the dance. It was a serious matter for the dancers, for on the day was at its busiest a hold blast of a hunter's horn came from the edge of the forest. It was followed speederence to the part played by the egg lly by the appearance of a company of mounted gallants in such splendid attire that the peasants stopped in the dance to gaze open mouthed at the apparition. The Princess Margaret and her party were almost equally amazed to behold such splendor issuing from the forest. At the head of the troop, on a spirited white charger, rode a young man whose rich dress and knightly bearing proclaimed him to be a person of great consequence. Without further preliminary he rode directly to the side of the chatelaine of Bourg. sprang from his horse, doffed his plumed hat and, bending a graceful knee, requested her hospitality for himself and his men. "Sir, I am honored in the asking," she responded graciously, for she knew that her would be guest was Philibert

"Break all of them if you will, madame, but do not break my heart," he returned presumptuously.

She would not reassure him by any spoken word, and, amid the plaudits of he onlookers, they entered on the trial. The Princess Margaret's doleful prediction was not fulfilled. At the end of the dance it was announced publicy that not a single egg had been bro-

"I suppose you are right," she admitted softly. "One cannot do violence

She was so capable and so highly esteemed that she was made regent of Holland. She was also a poet of no mean distinction and left enough interesting letters to make two Wreckage Tells Fate of Tug. Cleveland, O., April 10 .- The finding of additional pieces of wreckage from the fishing tug George A. Floss, which disappeared in the storm on Lake Erie, along the shore 12 miles east of Cleveland, has practically dispelled all belief that the tug is afloat. Pieces of the boat's cabin, parts of fishing nets and life preservers from the missing craft have been washing in along the shore.

Easter services will be held in the American Student's Body Recovered. Vienna, April 10 .- The body of Oliver Bray, an American student of 10:45. The Ven. Rev. Frank B. Wentmedicine, who disappeared last month and for whom diligent search had been made, was taken from the Danube river. It was said at the time of the occasion. All are cordially in- his disappearance that young Bray was suffering from a serious nervous
